Do you want to determine if KU Libraries subscribe to a certain journal? Would you like to know if you can access the journal online, in print, or both? You can search the KU Libraries catalog to determine both print and online availability, as well as the years of coverage.
To begin your search, click on the “Library Catalog” tab on the left of the KU Libraries home page.
Select “Journal Title” from the drop down menu.

Type the name of the journal in the search box. For this example, we will search for Journal of Social Psychology.

Click “Search”.
As you can see, there are two results for this search. Let’s take a look at the first result. This result shows the print holdings of this journal.
Scroll down to see which years of publication the KU Libraries own. We have coverage from 1930-2007 in print.
Let's go back to our results screen and take a look at the second entry.

This result tells us that the Journal of Social Psychology is also available electronically.
Click where it says “CLICK HERE to identify full text options.”
The next screen tells us that this journal is found in 8 of the KU Libraries databases. Pay attention to the years of coverage to make sure the years you need are available.

At this point, you can choose any one of the listed databases to search the publication. Which one you choose depends on the year you are looking for, and perhaps the database you are familiar with. For the purposes of this example, we will click on the “Academic Search Complete” option.
We are now in the Academic Search Complete databases, searching only within the Journal of Social Psychology. Now, you can either click on a specific year to browse, or search within this publication for your topic.
